

MISSOURI VALLEY GETS RAIN

Precipitation is Heavy and Extends Over Large Area

GREAT FOR THE SPRING CROPS

Moisture Soaks Into the Ground and Will Go a Long Way Toward Staving Off Any Possible Drought Spell.

While Omaha was being given a thorough drenching Thursday night, the whole of Nebraska, western Iowa, the southern portion of South Dakota, Kansas, Colorado and Wyoming got the same kind of treatment. According to the reports to the railroads it was the heaviest and most general rain of the season. It is declared that it will be of incalculable value to the growing crop and will preclude the possibility of a drought during the early portion of the growing period, at least.

Station reports to the railroads indicate that in many localities a light fall of hail accompanied the rain and some wind, but not enough to do any large amount of damage. Throughout the western portion of the state the rain commenced early in the afternoon and continued well into the night and without any cessation. Up the Elkhorn valley and out in the South Platte country, it started in the early evening and for from four to six hours there was a steady downpour, coming down gently and all soaking into the ground.

Rainfall is Heavy. From more than 100 stations in Nebraska the Burlington, Union Pacific, Northwestern, Missouri Pacific and Rock Island report from three-fourths to an inch of rain during Thursday afternoon and night. At no place did the rain reach flood proportions and it came so gently and continued over such a long period that there was no damage.

Tramlines from the west asserted that all the way from Wyoming to Omaha it rained a greater portion of the night and that the water standing on the ground indicated that the soil had been soaked to a depth of several inches at least.

Along the Missouri river valley and over in Iowa the precipitation was a little heavier than out in the state. In Omaha the rainfall was slightly in excess of one and one-fourth inches and about the same down as far as Nebraska City and up the river to Tekamah.

Railroad reports are to the effect that out in the state it is clear and the temperature rising rapidly.

Omaha Naval Club to Organize a Company

The Omaha Naval club, composed of men who have been in the service in the United States Navy, are organizing a company which will enlist here at the first call for recruits, issued by the Secretary of the Navy. The men who are forming the organization for re-enlistment are for the most part, unmarried men, though it is said that several married men who have seen service in the navy have secretly signified their intention of going back into the navy, in the event that war is declared. There are more than 20 men in Omaha who have served in the navy before the Stars and Stripes, and it is said that at least one fourth of that number will respond at the first call for men.
